INKBOUND

2D PHYSICS CLIMBER / SINGLE PLAYER

One hammer. One light. A comic that turns against you.

A Getting Over It-inspired climb through a dark comic book themed environment. Swing a glowing hammer to grip, push and vault across inked panels. It is both your only movement tool and the only light source in the game world.

01 THE PLAYER EXPERIENCE

You are a small comic character trying to reach the final panel and escape an unfinished story. There is no jump button: mouse movement rotates the hammer around the character. Catch a ledge, push off a surface, build momentum and commit to the next move.

The hammer casts a local pool of light. Moving it reveals the next grip but can hide the ledge beneath you, linking visibility directly to movement. Falls lose height; fast recovery and readable nearby surfaces keep each retry focused on learning.

02 ALL THREE THEMES DRIVE THE GAME

COMIC Bold outlines, halftone textures, panel borders ,etc make the level like a playable comic. Panel edges, lettering and illustrated props become climbing surfaces.

LIGHT The glowing hammer is the sole in-world light source. Its position determines what the player can see and where they can safely plan their next swing.

TWIST There is a major gameplay twist in the middle of the game (which i am not revealing here).

03 TEAM DETAILS

Vishesh Khemka |
IndieConnect ID: awareant_7
Email:
visheshkhemka49@gmail.com

Rangraj Chhabra |

IndieConnect ID: rangraj7

Email:
rangrajchhabra@gmail.com

Anubhav Dubey |

IndieConnect ID: slayer56

Email:
anubav.dubey@students.iiit.ac.in